Vol. 80 No. 4 "THE BRITISH GUIANA 1856 1¢ MAGENTA: $1 MILLION ? APR. '80

EDITORIAL.....by John Kellas

The philatelic event of the decade will take place April 5th with the sale of "the world's most valuable stamp", the British Guiana 1856 1¢ Magenta. It is believed that the final hammer price on this "stamp" will have a profound market effect on the entire spectrum of philately. The fallout from the sale of the Br. Guiana 1¢ will be felt by both the large stamp investors and the small, average stamp collector. If the Br. Guiana 1¢ manages to sell for a bid price of $900,000.00 or better it is probable that the stamp's 1970 investors have made out very well on their investments. This would fire up today's bullish philatelic market, pushing the prices and values upward on both investment grade stamps and even hinged, no gum, poor centered stamps! This rippling effect would also affect philatelic items and books indirectly too. However, should the Br. Guiana 1¢ do poorly on the auction block, say less than $700,000.00, this could have a stabilizing effect, perhaps slowing the upward climb -thus a break for the "collector's" pocketbook. It must also be remembered that there will be several rarities for sale at the April 5th Auction beside the "star". Yet the limelight will be focused on the Br. Guiana 1¢, the ultimate philatelic prize for one's collection even if the chance is extremely remote we would all like a peice of the ROCK.

Market survey estimates U.S. collecting populace

By James H. Brunts
Washington Correspondent

According to data recently released by the U.S. Postal Service, stamp collecting is enjoyed by more than 11 per cent of the U.S. population.

That projection is based on a market survey conducted for the USPS by the firm of Young and Rubicam Inc. in 1976. The survey report, which was submitted to postal officials in January 1977, estimates that there are perhaps as many as 22 million stamp enthusiasts in this country.

Compared to previously available statistics, this represents an increase of more than 6 million collectors during roughly the last 10 years. For purposes of the survey, the New York advertising agency defined a current collector as "a person who added stamps from any country to a collection, or started a new one, within the past 12 months."

What the survey shows is that U.S. stamps are largely the issues which are regularly being added to both old and new collections. The overwhelming majority of those defined as collectors (96 per cent) reported purchasing U.S. stamps for their collections.

Although respondents ranged in age from 6 years old and up, 61 per cent were above 21 (this group accounts for about 85 per cent of all stamp purchases made in the United States for one reason or another). Two-thirds of those surveyed began collecting at an early age, and most reported that during their late teens, the demands of school and social activities forced them temporarily to set aside collecting.

Pleasure, not investment, appears to be the reason why most return to the hobby. Although the margin is slight, statistically more females enjoy collecting than do males. The ratio is 53 to 47 per cent. Female respondents tended to be older when they began collecting; two-thirds of the women collectors questioned noted that they started collecting after age 30.

Although the majority of the female respondents indicated that they began collecting later in life, they made up for their late start by collecting later into life than do men.

The survey data also indicate just how big the business of philately has become. Reportedly, collectors spent approximately $1.3 billion during 1976. That figure represents about one-half of the total sales for the entire U.S. hobby industry for that year.

On a dollar-for-dollar basis, the survey reports that males spend much more for collecting purposes than do females. According to the study, men tend to spend about twice as much as women.

Collectors from all incomes and educational levels were found to be evenly represented in the survey, and, as would be expected, on a per capita basis collectors with an annual income of more than $15,000 generally spent more on the hobby. In fact, they spent about twice as much as those in any other income group.

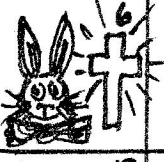

Also as a group, college-educated collectors (representing about 14 per cent of the adult hobbyists) tended to be larger spenders; sales to this group account for slightly more than the combined total for those collectors with elementary or high school educations.
