

US REVENUE STAMPS – FIRST ISSUE “USING COMMERCE TO FUND THE CIVIL WAR”

This postal history exhibit covers the usage of US First Issue revenue stamps on documents during the Civil War and post-Civil War era. When the Civil War broke out in 1861, Congress passed sweeping new tax measures, including the Revenue Act of July 1, 1862, creating a wide variety of new taxes. As part of this revenue collection effort, the first federal adhesive revenue stamps were issued in 1862 by Butler & Carpenter of Philadelphia.

The organization of the single stamps in this exhibit is usage. The documents are in value sequence with the highest value on a document taking precedence unless the lower values have no other representation. Note – This is a representative sample of denominations and usages – no exhibit can contain all of them. The scope does not include imperforate or part-perforate except as an example of the stamp below.

The stamps were issued initially as Imperforate, followed by Part Perforate and finally, Perforate. Below are 3 examples along with an example showing Butler & Carpenter's name on a border stamp. Papers were primarily wove but a major variety was silk paper.

Butler & Carpenter Co. was required to deliver the stamps by October 1, 1862 (the first day of the federal fiscal year, when the new tax began). Almost 1.5 billion "First Issue" revenue stamps would be delivered over the next decade.

This exhibit shows the stamps created out of this taxing effort and shows vignettes of business transactions (each reviewed and summarized) targeted to be taxed to help fund the war effort. Individual stamps and stamps used on period documents show the variety and extent of this effort. All usages were verified to ensure the correct amount of revenue was collected. Those with incorrect amounts will be so noted.

Taxpayers were initially required to match purposes and amounts to specific stamps (although this rule was relaxed by the end of 1862).
