

Synopsis of “Woody Guthrie: His Life and His Songs”

This Display Division exhibit tells the story of American folk musician Woody Guthrie’s life and illustrates some of his song lyrics with stamps, covers, postal stationery, and other philatelic material, enhanced by various non-philatelic material.

Exhibit history. From the time it was first shown at Sandical in 1993, this exhibit confounded philatelic judges. It seemed to tell a thematic story, but it didn’t conform to the rules of thematic exhibiting. In the ensuing nine years, some juries saw it as a thematic exhibit, while others saw it as a special study. During that time, it won every level of medal from bronze to gold at national shows. Mostly, however, it won silvers and vermeils. Among its many special awards were eight ATA medals, sometimes from juries who said they had judged it as a special study. The exhibit has the strange honor of having won the Lefebre Award for the best non-thematic exhibit by an RPA member at ROPEX 1997 and the Gubler Award for the best thematic exhibit by an RPA member at ROPEX 1999! Since being reorganized as a Display Division exhibit in 2002, it has won two vermeils and five golds at national shows. It also received a Court of Honor gold award at OKPEX 2010.

Status of material. All the philatelic items are originals, of course, although a few items are accompanied by photocopies of the other side in whole or in part. All of the non-philatelic items are the genuine articles, with the exception of the two reproductions of Woody Guthrie self-portraits, one of just himself and the other of him with his second wife. The original pen-and-ink drawings are in the Woody Guthrie Archives and are not for sale. Also, the THIS MACHINE KILLS FASCISTS sticker is a modern recreation. On the other hand, all photos that were published in books were actually clipped from those books. They are not photocopies or scans.

Philatelic variety. This is the exhibit’s area of strength. Along with what one would normally expect from the Postal Division are such esoteric items as a New York Foreign Mail star cancellation, a Port Townsend kicking mule cancellation, a cover to an American soldier in the Philippines postmarked on Pearl Harbor Day, a letter-sheet to an American POW in Germany postmarked on the day Germany surrendered, a German stamp used on cover with Hitler’s head obliterated by Soviet occupation forces, two air mail crash covers, a railway fire cover, a flood cover, a Wells Fargo & Company frank, and a US 1875 special printing with SPECIMEN overprint. Yes, there is a proof in the exhibit, and an imperf error pair. There is even one CTO shown for the sake of philatelic variety!

The exhibit also includes a large variety of philatelic material from the Revenue Division, the Illustrated Mail Division, the Cinderella Division, and the Post Card Division.

But why so much US material? Because Woody Guthrie’s story is essentially an American story, and it is best told with material from the United States. Nevertheless, the exhibit contains philatelic material from more than two dozen other countries as well.

Variety of non-philatelic items. Among the many items included are photographs, a phonograph record, book covers, pages from song books, newspaper clippings, British wartime rail travel coupons, a New York City taxi driver’s license, a US wartime Mileage Rationing Record, a US Maritime Service patch, Port of New York Authority toll scrip, a New York Transit Authority subway token, and a US Silver Certificate.

Note regarding autographs. All autographs were either obtained from the person directly or were purchased from reputable dealers and compared with known examples.
